The Keck Biophysics Facility at Northwestern University is seeking a full-time Research Technologist. The ideal candidate will have intellectual curiosity, motivation to learn a variety of cutting-edge biophysical techniques, excellent communication skills and ability to work effectively in a small team environment. The Research Technologist will provide training and assistance to the facility's users, will perform maintenance and calibration of the instrumentation and assist with billing, scheduling and purchasing.

Minimum Qualifications and Skills

- M.S. or B.S. in Biophysics, Biochemistry, Biological Sciences, Bio-engineering, Organic Chemistry or related field.
- Basic laboratory skills including: buffer preparation, titration, pipetting, filtration, concentration measurements
- Previous experience working in a laboratory setting
- Excellent oral and written communication skills.

Preferred Qualifications and Skills

- Experience with one or more of the following techniques: Spectroscopy (Absorbance, Fluorescence, CD), Calorimetry, Surface Plasmon Resonance, HPLC, qPCR,
- Experience in structural biology or drug screening
- Experience in maintaining and troubleshooting research instrumentation and/or computers
- Teaching or tutoring experience

To apply:

Please submit your CV to a-grigorescu@northwestern.edu Please include the contact information of 2-4 professional references.